

respective optical signals being combined and superposed into an optical signal path; and a control device distributing the bits between said light transmitters.
